Digital Economy Ministry launches Jordan Growth Programme

The Ministry of Digital Economy and Entrepreneurship has launched the "Jordan Growth Programme (Businesses Development)", offering grants and incentives to enhance digital companies' expansion in local and global markets. The "Jordan Growth Programme" is part of the $200-million World Bank-funded "Youth, Technology and Jobs" project launched by the government two months ago to improve the income generated by the Jordanian digital sector and expand e-government services, the ministry said in a statement cited by the Jordan News Agency, Petra. The project's programmes and incentives will help in stimulating supply and demand in the digital industry over five years, the statement added, noting that the programme will finance 50 per cent of private technology enterprises' business development plans towards creating new job opportunities for young Jordanians.

King urges global cooperation to enhance access to healthcare, food security

His Majesty King Abdullah on Monday participated in the Bloomberg New Economy Forum, which focused this year on bolstering international cooperation and fortifying various economic sectors, especially in light of the repercussions of the COVID-19 pandemic. The forum, held virtually over four days, features the participation of several current and former heads of state, influential business executives, government officials, and academic and economic experts from around the world, to exchange ideas and discuss means of promoting global action towards sustainability and inclusive growth, according to a Royal Court statement.
