King directs gov't to have NCSCM as main point of reference on handling COVID-19

His Majesty King Abdullah on Tuesday directed the government to have the National Centre for Security and Crisis Management (NCSCM) as the main point of reference on handling the COVID-19 crisis, due to its role in unifying efforts, stressing the importance of teamwork among all institutions. Chairing a National Policies Council (NPC) meeting attended by HRH Crown Prince Hussein, King Abdullah reaffirmed that safeguarding the health and wellbeing of Jordanians is a priority, stressing the need to uphold the rule of law to protect citizens at all times, according to a Royal Court statement. During the meeting, attended by Their Royal Highnesses Prince Feisal, adviser to His Majesty and NPC chairperson, and Prince Ali, NCSCM chairperson, His Majesty commended the role of the Jordan Armed Forces-Arab Army and security agencies in upholding the rule of law, noting that no one is above the law.

Water minister, UNDP official discuss rainwater harvesting projects

Water Minister Motasem Saidan on Tuesday highlighted the importance of financing entrepreneurial projects related to household rainwater harvesting. During a meeting with UNDP Resident Representative Sara Ferrer Olivella, Saidan noted that reusing water through utilising modern technologies and applications enjoys easy maintenance and operation in addition to being environment friendly, the Jordan News Agency, Petra, reported. The minister said that olive mill wastewater is one of the most dangerous pollution sources of ground and surface water, calling for implementing strict programmes to monitor the transport of this item to specialised landfills. Olivella pointed out that UNDP has several projects to support decision making, develop databases and enhance risk management programmes, stressing that unifying these efforts will render these plans a success.
