Macroeconomic & Corporate News

Gov't postpones declaring July fuel prices until pricing mechanism is made public

The government's fuel pricing committee on Saturday decided to postpone the announcement of the July oil derivatives prices until the government announces its fuel pricing mechanisms, which it had pledged to share "clearly and transparently" with the public, the Jordan News agency, Petra reported. Earlier this month, the Fourth Circle in Amman and other locations across the Kingdom witnessed several protests against fuel and electricity price hikes by Hani Mulki's government as well as an income tax draft law. The protesters' calls found support across the country, and were followed by a Royal decree freezing the decision to hike prices. The government's current decision postponed the pricing of unleaded 95-octane gasoline, unleaded 90-octane gasoline, kerosene, and diesel.

CBJ issues new anti-money laundering and terrorism financing regulations

The Central Bank of Jordan (CBJ) on Saturday issued new anti-money laundering and countering financing of terrorism regulations for licensed banks, the Jordan News Agency, Petra, reported. The regulations, approved by the National Anti-Money Laundering and Terrorist Financing Committee on June 23, will replace those issued in 2010. CBJ said that the rules, which became effective as of June 26, came in response to the recommendations of the international Financial Action Task Force of 2012 and developments in local and international markets. The regulations included amendments such as working on a risk-evaluation basis, and asking banks to conduct a comprehensive evaluation for possibilities of money laundering and terrorism funding annually.

Jordan's crude phosphate, pharmaceutical imports drop in 2018

Jordan's import of crude phosphate dropped by 20.8 per cent during the last four months, while pharmaceuticals dropped by 5.9 per cent, the Jordan News Agency, Petra, reported on Saturday. According to the Department of Statistics (DoS), national exports of garment and related accessories rose by 21.2 per cent during the first third of 2018. Exports of crude potash also rose by 16.7 per cent, fertilisers by 20.5 per cent and inorganic chemicals by 16.4 per cent compared with the same period in 2017. Meanwhile, the imports of crude oil and its derivatives rose by 30 per cent, according to DoS.
