Market Review & Outlook

The MENA markets had a slow month in particular the GCC markets which underperformed the global equity markets. During the month, Crude Oil Brent closed the month at $53.53 down 5.82% from February close due to the foggy atmosphere regarding the freezing renewal agreement between oil producers. In the US, and for the second time in three months, the Federal Reserve increased its benchmark interest rate a quarter point amid rising confidence that the economy is poised for more robust growth. However, markets in the US declined slightly during March with the Dow Jones Industrial Index closing down by 0.72% and S&P500 Index closing flat MoM.

Regionally, Egyptian market increased the most by 8.86% due to the decline in the EGP exchange rates against the USD. Alongside Egypt, Amman stock exchange also outperformed the GCC markets closing the month up by 1.7% due to the results seasonality. In Qatar, Doha Stock Exchange was one of the most losers in the GCC region with Doha Index declining by 2.91% which was mainly due to the dividends distribution effect. There are not a great deal of events in Doha especially after the FTSE phase II is over.

Market Review & Outlook

In UAE, both Dubai and Abu Dhabi markets has declined during March by 4.13% and 2.4% respectively. Since December, margin balances have tanked and until the domestic retail/HNW re-engage one should not rely upon EM inflows alone to take markets higher. In addition, with 1st quarter results are ahead of us, retail investors are being cautious in allocating their investments.

However, we believe that the market will be more active in April. In Saudi Arabia, latest news suggest that the tax rate for Aramco will be reduced from 85% to 50%, which is another box ticked in the ongoing development of the Tadawul, ahead of its MSCI upgrade during the coming period. Recent sensitivity analysis suggests that the indicates a value of Aramco is approximately $1trn. We expect the listing of the firm will affect liquidity in the market. However, the Saudi Index has been trading the range between 7,000 and 6,800 closing March at 7001, reflecting a slight upward performance of 0.42%
