Jordan, Brazil set to expand economic relations

His Majesty King Abdullah on Sunday met with Brazilian Foreign Minister Aloysio Nunes, a Royal Court statement said. During the meeting, Nunes handed His Majesty a letter from Brazil President Michel Temer that tackled ways to improve bilateral relations between the two countries. His Majesty stressed Jordan's keenness to boosting cooperation with Brazil, especially in the economic field. Talks covered Jordan's strengths as an investment destination, including its strategic location, which makes it a candidate to serve as a gateway into regional, African and Asian markets. King Abdullah and Nunes also discussed the prospects of signing an agreement to encourage investment between the two countries. They went over ways of benefiting from the Mercosur economic bloc, which brings together Brazil, Argentine, Uruguay and Paraguay.

18 investors apply to obtain citizenship, residency under incentive scheme

The JIC, which announced it would start receiving applications as of February 26th, said a total of 18 applications meeting all requirements and conditions were received by Sunday. "One of these applications received the initial approval and we are receiving inquiries on a daily basis for further clarification of the new instructions," Minister of State for Investment Affairs and JIC Chairman Muhannad Shehadeh told The Jordan Times in a phone interview on Sunday. The Arab investors who submitted the applications are of Lebanese, Iraqi, Palestinian and Yemeni nationalities, he noted.
