Market Review & Outlook

The MENA markets had a slow month in particular the GCC markets which underperformed the global equity markets. In February, Crude Oil Brent closed the month at $56.51 up 1.07% from January close. US markets had a good run during February, with the Dow Jones Industrial Index closing the month above 20,000 level at 20,812 (up 4.77% versus previous month) and S&P 500 Index closing the month up by 3.72%.

In the MENA region, Amman Stock Exchange outperformed the regional markets. During February, the Jordanian Index increased by 2.37% due to the seasonality of preliminary results announcement. In Qatar, the Doha Stock Market has increased by 1% during February, witnessing a decent amount of foreign inflows prior to any FTSE activity. We expect to see ongoing an inflows across large names in Qatar besides speculative positioning in some small names. In Egypt, the market has declined 5.80% due to the strength of EGP against USD where the local currency has increased by 15%.

Market Review & Outlook

Moving to Saudi and Emirati markets, Tadawul Index witnessed the highest volatility in the market (trading sideways) closing the month down by 1.82% unlike Abu Dhabi and Dubai markets who closed the month with almost a flat performances, 0.07% and -0.34% respectively.

During the month, the Saudi Stock Exchange launched the "Nomu-Parallel Market", listing nine Saudi companies out of 77 applied to be listed on the index designed to buttress and further increase growth and business development of the financial market. Clearly this will be the new small retail investors' playground, with plenty more listings expected in the next couple of months.

UAE markets seem a little relaxed with western accounts engaging occasionally in the large names and retail clients actually turning down on their margin activity, especially after the disappointing results from names such as ARTC.
