King cancels Bahrain visit after Dead Sea incident

His Majesty King Abdullah on Thursday cancelled a working visit to the Kingdom of Bahrain on Friday to follow up on a tragic incident that saw at least 18 people, mostly schoolchildren, die as flashfloods swept the Dead Sea area where they were picnicking, a Royal Court statement said. His Majesty was following up with concerned officials on the tragic deaths in Zara-Maeen, the hot springs area on the shores of the Dead Sea. He was due to meet with Bahraini King Hamad Bin Isa Al Khalifa, and to participate in the 2018 IISS Manama Dialogue – 14th regional security summit during the period from 26 to 28 of this month. His Majesty was also scheduled to deliver the keynote at the summit, hosted by Bahrain for the 14th time since 2004.

Cruise ships dock in Aqaba marking winter tourism season

Two cruise ships carrying around 3,000 European tourists docked in Aqaba Port on Saturday. The tourists' itinerary comprises of Aqaba, Wadi Rum and Petra, and the two ships are part of the cruise ship season which started in September and will last until February, the Jordan News Agency, Petra, reported. Aqaba Special Economic Zone Authority (ASEZA) Spokesperson Abdul Mahdi Qatamin expected a third ship to arrive later in the day with more than 2,000 European tourists aboard. Qatamin said that ASEZA had prepared a programme to receive the ships and transfer the tourists to the city centre, before they left for Wadi Rum and Petra. He added that the authorities, in cooperation with stakeholders, had prepared for the winter tourism season according to the "highest standards". More than 43,000 tourists visited the port city via cruise ships in 2016.

Commission reports almost 3,000 blackouts during depression

The Energy and Minerals Regulatory Commission (EMRC) chief commissioner, Farouq Hiyari said that 2,986 blackouts occurred on Thursday during the depression, which were fixed by Friday night, the Jordan News Agency, reported. He added that the main blackout took place near the collapsed bridge close to the Dead Sea. Hiyari said that the EMRC and the electricity sector act in accordance with central regulations and plans, as well as private guidelines, to deal with weather-related emergencies and the load on the power grid.
