Jordan's dependence on imports threatens its food security — experts

"Can we feed the world with a few drops of water?" is the question that experts in food security addressed on Saturday, during a panel discussion held by the World Food Programme (WFP) and the Food and Agriculture Organisation (FAO), where stakeholders agreed that Jordan is in "dire need" of strengthening its internal agriculture production to secure food availability. "Jordan is currently not suffering from shortages in food availability, but the Kingdom has been historically exposed to major shocks due to its dependence on imports and the unstable conditions of the region," FAO Representative in Jordan Nasredin Hag Elamin stated, stressing the need to improve the Jordanian agriculture sector to prevent inflection points in food security in the event of an unexpected lack of imports.

ASEZA announces tax exemption on departing goods

The Aqaba Special Economic Zone Authority (ASEZA) on Sunday announced a tax exemption on goods passengers take out of the zone, provided that the cost of merchandise does not exceed JD2,000, the Jordan News Agency, Petra, reported. ASEZA Chief Commissioner Nasser Shraideh said that the decision aims to address the economic recession and stimulate trade activities within the zone, in a way that contributes to the easier flow of goods, while limiting tax and customs evasions. In order to benefit from the decision, travellers should provide an invoice with an address outside of the Kingdom, and a detailed description for these goods, he added.
