CBJ's foreign currency reserve stands at $14 billion

Foreign currency reserve at the Central Bank of Jordan (CBJ) stands at $14 billion, which is enough to cover the Kingdom's imports for more than eight months, CBJ Governor Ziad Fariz said on Tuesday. Participating in the first session of the seventh conference for Jordanian businesspeople and investors abroad, Fariz said that the Kingdom's banking system is "solid and sound" and enjoys high potential and preparedness to provide finances necessary for the activities of the private sector, the Jordan News Agency, Petra, reported. The fixed exchange rate system that CBJ has been "successfully" adopting since 1995 forms the main pillar of the monetary policy and is among the most important elements of the monetary and financial stability and confidence in the national economy, the governor said.

APC to export red potash to south America this month — chairman he Arab Potash Company (APC) will begin exporting red granular potash to south America this month, the company's chairman has recently said. During a press conference on Sunday, APC's Chairman of the Board of Directors Jamal Al Sarayrah announced that the company has begun producing red granular potash, which, he said, would open new markets to the company and diversify its customer base, reducing the company's market and geographical risk exposure. Sarayrah added that entering these new markets will enable the company to sell its products at higher prices, which will have a positive impact on the APC's profits. Sarayrah noted that the company has the raw materials needed to produce specialty and soluble fertilisers, for which the global demand has grown by 5-7 per cent, and which have high price margins compared to APC's standard products.

They stressed that concluding the discussions over the economic cooperation agreement is a "crucial step".
